

Ethics and plagiarism

Plagiarism is not acceptable in this journal. Also please be advised that data and image manipulation and fabrication, are not tolerated.

Plagiarism includes the use of text, tables, figures, images and experimental data from another source, even from your personal previous publications, without citing the original source.

The use of text, images or data that is copied from another source must be clearly pointed out in the paper text and the original source must be cited.

If plagiarism is detected during the review process, the article will be rejected. If plagiarism is detected after publication, we will publish a correction, an errata or even retract the paper.
